To this growth of the University must be added the most happy inception and growth of Radcliffe College, marking as it does the maturing of a new era in the education of women. We may well wish for Radcliffe a career as noble and as useful as that of Harvard, and I doubt not that such is in store for it. A word must be said of the Episcopal Theological School, based upon ideas as sound and broad as Christianity; and of the New-Church Theological School, more recently founded. We must hail such indications of the tendency towards making our Cambridge the centre for the untrammelled study of the most vital problems that can occupy the human mind. 1 In 1898 the number had risen to 4660, besides 411 women students in RadclifFe. But the day we are celebrating is...
