He has no regard for anyone who is not seeking money or who is influenced by anything but mercenary motives, and for both these reasons he scorns the forester. The figure of the pastor of Waldenrode is a disappointment, all the more keen because Ludwig had such a high ideal of this type. In an essay on Waller Scott² he writes: The figure of the country parson is the most interesting to construct, owing to the contrasting classes to which he belongs, 1Act II, scene 7. aVI, 90. the humanistic education which he has received and reminiscences of his university life; he is at once a scholar, a peasant and an official, a representative of God and a subject of the Consistory; he is the most illustrious and respected person in the village, and in the city a comical figure. And yet Ludwig...
